INTRODUCTION

By Nathaniel Jackson, General Secretary,
Salt Lake Commercial Club.

R EPLETE WITH INTEREST is the 1920 directory of R. L. Polk & Company; it takes issue with the government census as regards population; it has a classified section which, compared with the classified section of the 1910 directory, discloses startling industrial growth of Salt Lake City; its careful perusal will convince any far-seeing real estate investor that fortunes should be in store for those who invest in Salt Lake property during the next decade and beyond.

In summing up the actual population of Salt Lake City the corps of Polk experts have gone into careful study of the population, which will be immediately beneficial to the merchant, the manufacturer and whoever is benefitted by a healthy municipal growth. It is a well known fact that when the government census men took the population of Salt Lake City during January and February of this year they were bound by corporate city limits, which in some instances passed through heavily populated sections of the city. An instance of this is found along old Twelfth South street, which marks the southern corporate limits of Salt Lake City. It has been admitted by government census takers that the population immediately south of this boundary line is larger than the population immediately north. Consequently, the government census of Salt Lake City is not sufficiently complete to be of any direct value to the average business man. He must look for the population of a more extensive area; one which is commonly reached by telephone lines, still within the district which does not exact toll; where street car transportation is available and where the streets are well paved to guarantee swift transportation for automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles. But this the Polk corps of experts has done, and they have included in their population, which is really of value to a business man, the district immediately south of Twelfth South and Murray, Midvale, Sandy, Union, West Jordan, Pleasant Green and Garfield. Here they find that the population of Salt Lake City is actually 150,388. The government census which did not include the heavily populated district immediately south of the southern corporate limits, or of the immediate suburban settlements, was 118,110. That showed a very substantial growth for a period of ten years. However, the Polk directory men declare that fully five thousand people were out of the city or were overlooked when the census was taken, even within the corporate limits, which bound the United States census men as far as Salt Lake City was concerned.

The practice of all standard directories in giving a population is that of multiplying the number of names taken by two. That practice is regarded as the most accurate method of arriving at a population known, except when some method is pursued of actually finding either at home or abroad every living individual who should be credited to the population of a city.

This is a most opportune time to avail oneself of information contained in the classified section of the directory of vital importance for there is nothing quite as inspiring to a trained real estate investor or realtor as to compare the 1920 classified section with the classified section of 1910. This comparison, which it would be impossible to analyze in an introductory, gives evidence of tremendous industrial growth in and about Salt Lake City, giving a basis for a manner of estimating the increased value of property and for the making of investments in real estate.

STREET AND AVENUE GUIDE

(Copyright Secured 1920).

The arrangement of this Street and Avenue Guide is copyrighted annually by R. L. Polk & Co., of Utah. All Rights Reserved.

EXPLANATORY.

The street system of Salt Lake City is original. The Temple Block is taken as the center. The beginning of all regular streets is the southeast corner of the Temple Block (Brigham Young Monument). The streets running north, east, south and west of this block are North Temple, Main, (or East Temple), South Temple, and West Temple, respectively. The next streets north, east, south and west parallel with the above named streets are First North, State (or First East), First South and First West, respectively, and so on in regular order of numbering to the limits of the city, all the eight rod streets.

The narrower streets in the northeastern section of the city are named as follows: Commencing on the north side of South Temple street, the first street running north (east of State street), is A street, the second one parallel therewith, B street, the next, C, and so on to the eastern limits of the city. The same system of streets at right angles with the above are numbered. The first street north and parallel with South Temple street being First avenue, the next Second avenue, and so on to the northern limits of the city.

Re-naming of Streets

In 1907 a number of streets were re-named, the following rules being observed:

All streets less than 132 feet running east and west are called avenues.

All duplicate names of streets are abolished.

All combinations of streets having different names from the original street are made to correspond in name.

All streets on the North Bench running east and west are called avenues.

Numbering of Houses

In blocks of 660 feet there is allowed 100 numbers to the block. Blocks of 330 feet have fifty numbers. Center street and other streets running northerly and southerly in Plat "E", have one number to each rod of frontage.

STREETS, AVENUES, ETC.

There's Safety in the ONE PRICE Policy

Our policy of one price to all means that all customers are treated alike, that each transaction is fair to all concerned, that honest value is given for every dollar of the price asked. Our customers appreciate this modern principle of doing business.

A Well Defined Hope

That some one will take care of your family, is not Insurance. Neither is a

A Trust Certificate

But like hope, it is cheaper than insurance and unlike hope puts your wife on a million dollar monthly pay roll for life.
